Nevertheless, the International once again contends that its contract with International Vacuum was with International VCS (a company separate from the International), rather than the International. In addition, the International claims that this Court lacks personal jurisdiction over it because there 4 is no basis upon which to predicate personal jurisdiction over the International itself based on an action by the agent of that corporation. However, the relevant question is whether the International is amenable to suit based on an action by an agent acting within the scope of his authority. Clearly, the International itself may be held
