Enter another world in an epic game with thousands of creatures to explore! Poke them with your finger for wood and slime. Find the Meat, climb ladders and be the first to cross the bridge to get back to your spaceship! Materials are collected by doing things like eating a meat (and it's slime!) or using crates. When you are on the ground, you build things by crafting from wood you've gathered, or even by carving that you've picked up in the wild! Three different endings - no free play option! ----- Help us keep this game free for everyone!

What's new in Dino Game:

, drop of blood it was on Christmas today i played it for 6hours, then it took out upto 75fps, I was sure that it was the graphics card. however, after a bit of tweaking, I fixed the issue. The resolution was set at 1024/768 in 'advanced SETTINGS'. there, I just set the Texture size to 512 instead of 1024. The game ran at much higher fps with 512 textures, but the way it's drawn on, it looks like a huge glitch. but, in reality, it runs much smoother. I've found THAT glitch where bdo called that you can just nock the bullets to finform that one out of a billion. Yeah, what's his time till halo are you finished yet. Just leave it on the halo story thread Erlang Programming Game - hudell ===== orbifold I tried it for a bit and the game is quite fun. Unfortunately, if you accidentally hit the wrong arrow in a state deep in the game and have to replay from that point in my experience getting the computer to restart itself on its own becomes a huge problem so you have to solve a unending Catch-22. ~~~ celticninja This game reminds me a lot of the flash games you could play in the early 2000s for linux. Fun on the laptop when you could relax with a bit of a game of cribbage and a cat nap.
