Where can I find SmartDraw 9.2 License Key?.Hello, I have Windows Vista Home Premium x64 edition with a single hard drive partition containing System Reserved and the boot loader. I need to install an old software that needs to be on the system "explorer.exe". I found this: I found the msdn website and downloaded the program but it does not have an option to change the bootup image in the start menu. My question is: Where can I find the boot image file, it seems to be on the System Reserved partition. I have been trying to obtain the file to extract it on another partition on the drive and then add it to the boot up image file but I could not. I have also looked in the start menu but there is no option to change the boot up image. Any advise would be much appreciated. Regards, Rashid El Mezain. In an effort to be helpful, I did some searching. I can't provide a solution to your problem, as I don't have your system nor do I have the "old software" that you need, but I can point you in the right direction. Windows Vista comes with a basic set of icons included in the system folders on the C: drive. You can get a bunch more by following these instructions. However, for me, the best solution was to buy the program Icon Packer. This program allows you to set up your system so that you can set the background image you want to use, the change your start menu to something else, and add all of your icons and backgrounds to the start menu where you want them. All that is included in this program is a program icon as well as a plugin to disable the start button in the taskbar until you are ready to activate it. To explain in more detail, you can download the Icon Packer program from the link below. It is free, and you will need to enter a serial number to activate your download. After you 6d1f23a050
